Memorandum For: Students, Graduates, Faculty, and Staff of South Florida's School of Public Affairs

As Geographic Information Systems (GIS) continues to become a critical area for students and practitioners in urban/regional planning and development, the University of South Florida's School of Public Affairs is pleased to announce a series of graduate-level courses in this critical area. These graduate-level courses will be offered in the School of Public Affairs to our computer laboratory's most up-to-date software.
